

As of 1 April 2006, Onyx SA Waste Management Services (Pty) Ltd has changed its name in South Africa to Veolia Environmental Services SA (Pty) Ltd, a name that identifies the worldwide leading brand devoted to environmental solutions.

This local change is in line with strategic name and branding changes within French-based holding company, Veolia Environnement (VE).

Continuity

A perfect shape, the circle evokes serenity and emotion, symbolizing time and space, heaven and earth. It represents both the richness and fragility of our planet.

Ring

The ring symbolizes the union between two people or between an individual and a community. It expresses a voluntary relationship, the visible sign of the association of two destinies.

Protection

At the heart of this protective envelope lies something precious: a human being. As this graphic design takes shape, two arms emerge, coming together to enfold and protect.

VEOLIA
ENVIRONMENTAL SERVICES

The change from Onyx to Veolia Environmental Services conveys a clear message about our change in long-term strategy. Veolia Environmental Services will offer the full range of environmental services ranging from waste management, waste to energy, composting, electronic waste management, industrial services, recycling and recovery.

Our shared name becomes our first name

ONYX BECOMES VEOLIA ENVIRONMENTAL SERVICES

Seen at the Board of Directors' meeting in Hobart, Tasmania, where the change of name to Veolia Environmental Services was approved - Directors Richard Sanders, Doug Dean, Jean-Dominique Mallet and Tony Pinwell.

For over a year, a team of internal and external industry experts set to work on an unusual task : the development of a single brand, Veolia, that could embody a professional environmental services.

The change has focused on creating a shared, unifying company culture, instead of four juxtaposed ones, specific to each division (environmental management, energy, water and transport) within the parent company.

Traditionally Onyx SA has been associated with waste management, whilst internationally VE has been involved with a full range of environmental services waste to energy, recycling and recovery.

The South African company will now have full and unrestricted access to information and research data. It will also be able to implement any project that complements the range of services.

The name change is part of the drive to be recognised as the top company dedicated to ensuring a quality environment for the future. The aim is to convey a clear message throughout the world about VE's long-term strategy.

Until now VE has been a complex mix of different businesses and brands, dating from an era in which diverse names helped tailor its approach to different markets. But VE has strategised to now have a single symbol proudly declaring the union of strengths and expertise under the same colours.

The first step was to create the tools necessary for VE to become THE brand in the new field of industrial and municipal environmental services. This development has been combined with technological innovation with a unified, sustained effort to train employees and upgrade their professional qualifications.

The new Veolia Environmental Services as shown on the collection fleet

